Pogo is an underground cut-and-fill operation 38 miles northeast of Delta Junction. Discovered in 1994 and developed as a joint venture between Japanese firms Sumitomo Metal Mining and Sumitomo Corp., Australian company Northern Star bought the operation for $260 million in 2018. In a year, the mine moves 1.5 million tonnes of tailings and waste, refilling underground works with 14 million cubic feet of paste. Gravity, flotation, and cyanide leaching processes recover the gold.
